CIVIL SERVICE AND THE TRADE INIONS.

An issue which has of late been the chief troubler of France now threatens to be raised here. Since the settlement of the Drevfus case, nothing, with the possible exception of the conflict between Church and State, has caused so much disturbance and loss in France and been so great a menace to the integrity and and military servants of the state with the Federation of Labor. It has caused two colossal strikes which paralyzed industry, gravely hampered governmental administration and caused immense losses, suffering and even many deaths. To deal with it some of the most stringent governmental action in the history
